Newgy Industries Courts Table Tennis Followers at Collegiate Championships

Newgy Industries super salesman Roger Dickson will take his pitch for table tennis robots on the road to Monroeville, Pennsylvania.

It's hard to imagine the 2014 TMS College Table Tennis Championships near Pittsburgh if Roger wasn't around.

The energetic salesman and his Newgy Industries display will be once again showcased as North America's best collegiate table tennis players, coaches, and fans visit the Keystone State for the April 4-6 tournament.

At the April 2013 NCTTA championships in Rockford, Illinois, Dickson put a good spin on all the right reasons for customers to purchase a Robo-Pong machine. The equipment, he said, is family friendly, fun, and fantastic. The equipment allows players to pick up their paddles and improve their game anytime, day or night. In addition, the price tag is affordable.

The prices vary for almost anybody's budget. A Robo-Pong machine can cost anywhere between $249 and $699, according to the company's website.

Newgy Industries is the official robot sponsor of the College Table Tennis Championships.

Based in Gallatin, Tennessee, Newgy industries has been a longtime sponsor of NCTTA tournaments. The company's founder and owner, Joseph Newgarden Jr., began the company in 1972 because table tennis was his favorite hobby. Three years later, his hobby blossomed to become his business. The table tennis robot took 16 years of research and development before its commercial release in 1988.

Newgarden's creative initiative enjoyed success to the point where Newgy Industries is a world leader in producing table tennis robots. The machines quickly spit out table tennis balls to players at various speeds. Fans, players and family members visiting Monroeville for three days are invited to give it a try.

Dickson's Newgy booth is always a hit at table tennis tournaments all over the USA. One of the recent stops was the Newgy Akron Open in Ohio March 21-22. The lively games attracted 96 top players from seven states, including Mississippi, Kentucky and West Virginia, as well as Canada and Germany.

Newgy Industries is very popular with National Collegiate Table Tennis Association players across the USA and Canada for other reasons.

NCTTA leaders are delighted the company awards three Newgy Scholarships to deserving college table tennis players each year. The competition considers their performance on the court, essays and academic skills. Each player receives $1,000 to help pay for college costs.

No doubt, Newgy Industries & Roger Dickson will be among the big winners at the 2014 TMS College Table Tennis Championships!
